

Stuff in the Gym

- All the girls sit and gossip and play on their phones
- Camille figured out the school wifi code
- That new boy, keeps jumping up, touching the basketball net, and climbing it - he pretends like he slammed dunked the ball
- Martin is wearing Too much body spray
- Someone got new sneakers, and it caused a big scene in the boys locker room. They were all late to gym.
- Someone got gum on their shoe.
- There was almost a fight in one of the basketball games.
- People are always screaming too loud in the gym. It is still a CLASS!

Camille Figures out the School Wi-Fi Code

Earlier this week, Camille, an 8th Grade Student, used one of the school laptops to deduce the school's Wi-Fi password. After doing so, she found the signal and confirmed the password on her Smartphone during this morning's P.E. class. She was able to access her school email and submit the history homework while everyone else was sweating in the gym - or trying not to.

For the last year, students have been asking the principal to share the Wi-Fi code with students. There are only two computers in each classroom, yet they expect us to do more and more work that must be typed or submitted online. Students don't mind using their phones or other devices to access the internet if it makes getting classwork done easier or faster.

No one will be surprised to learn that the school's top-secret ultra-secure faculty-only Wi-Fi password is "password". Adults need to try harder. Students already do. When it comes to getting their work done, Camille's discovery could save students time and frustration.
